DEAR FRIEND

THE OVERWHELMING MAJORITY OF HEALTHCARE PROFESSIONALS

who serve with World Medical Mission for the very first time are not seasoned missionaries. It is a big step of faith for them to venture out into the unknown—an act of obedience to God's call that has reaped countless blessings for the patients they treat and for them personally.

In this edition of On Call, we will meet several doctors who said yes to God. Dr. Read Vaughan, a radiologist, and his wife, Suzie, have made more than a dozen trips with World Medical Mission, and the Lord continues to use their willingness to serve to transform lives inside and outside the walls of Kenya's Tenwek Hospital. Dr. Carolyn Grosvenor overcame fear with faith to minister to the needy in Haiti, and now she returns year after year. Likewise Jeff Smith, a family nurse practitioner, made his second trip there in 2018. And the Thiessen family left a comfortable life in Canada to move to Burundi, where they are serving through our Post-Residency Program.

Why do they go? Dr. Thiessen said part of the reason is to help bring healing and give dignity to those who are suffering. But he says his greatest privilege is sharing the Good News of Jesus Christ, the only One who can heal a person's body and soul.

That's what makes serving in a mission hospital so rewarding. Is the Lord calling you to venture out and serve for a few weeks as a medical missionary? If so, I encourage you to say yes to His leading: "I, even I, have spoken; yes, I have called him, I have brought him, and his way will prosper" (Isaiah 48:15).

Sincerely,

Franklin Graham
President, Samaritan's Purse

Notes from Around the World

Insights from some of the medical personnel who serve in mission hospitals in more than 20 countries through World Medical Mission.

Nigeria

Drs. Sean and Ashley Reimer and their three children are currently serving at Egbe Hospital through the Post-Residency Program.

Three-year-old Fiona had a mass growing inside of her. The night before her surgery, our three children visited the pediatric ward. When they came to Fiona's bed, she hid her face and began to cry. She was likely very self-conscious about her appearance. I wasn't quite sure how we would explain it to the kids if things didn't go well. Fortunately, we didn't have to! We were able to remove what was found to be a 9-pound kidney tumor from Fiona's abdomen. It was about one-third of her body weight. I was thrilled to see her two months after surgery looking like a normal 3-year-old girl. We felt quite honored to have been able to help. Thank God for His kindness to Fiona and her mother.

Liberia

Callie Carpenter is a biomedical engineer who went to ELWA Hospital on her first volunteer trip with World Medical Mission last summer.

I wanted to go on this trip to learn what it means to serve God overseas as a biomed. He taught me that and so much more! Working alongside a World Medical Mission biomedical technician, we fixed and assembled equipment for the hospital. We built IV poles, bedside tables, and more, and we repaired everything from IV pumps to patient monitors to dental suctions. When we weren't working, I got to hang out with missionaries. God used them to speak many words of wisdom into my life, including His definition of success. The week I spent in ELWA was life-changing for me. I will carry the lessons that God taught me in my heart forever, right beside those who shared them with me.

Dr. Philip Kittelson is the program coordinator of the Ruth Bell Riverboat. The medical outreach received a much-needed dental chair last summer.

The need came about because our old chair was malfunctioning, and it was becoming expensive to fix after every trip. Finally, some features were not able to be fixed, so we had to rig a portable dental unit which made the setup uncomfortable for our volunteer doctors and patients. Our dental consult room is not very large, and the extra rig took up a large portion of the space.

A World Medical Mission volunteer dentist and dental hygienist team saw the need when they served on the Ruth Bell in 2017, and they donated money toward a new dental chair. This covered most of the costs, and Samaritan's Purse provided the remainder in order to get a better chair with all of the basic components. We are so grateful to God and our donors that we finally have the chair.

REVEALING THE POWER OF GOD'S GRACE

Joni Eareckson Tada encouraged Christians to persevere in their service for the Lord during the Prescription for Renewal conference at The Cove in October 2018.

BILLY GRAHAM

"There's too much suffering in this world to not go, tell, and serve. But please go where no one else is going. Go where injustice and bigotry and cultural stigma are the order of the day. Go where the Kingdom is at its weakest and make it strong. Go and adorn the Gospel."

—Joni Eareckson Tada

These heartfelt words brought a standing ovation from attendees of the 2018 Prescription for Renewal conference, held Oct. 12-14 at the Billy Graham Training Center in Asheville, North Carolina. Tada, the founder of Joni and Friends International Disability Center, was one of the keynote speakers at this year's event.

The world-renowned champion for people with disabilities understands suffering—and God's sustaining grace in the midst of it. Left a quadriplegic following a diving accident when she was 17, Tada has dedicated her life to sharing the Good News of God's unconditional love.

"When you are on the field serving people like me who are wounded, heartbroken, anguished, and suffering, you are embodying the Gospel. You do this when you serve with World Medical Mission," she told the audience.

Tada challenged the medical professionals to "go the second mile" and follow Christ's example of sacrificial service and compassion.

"Answers for all the suffering in this world won't be unveiled until the other side of eternity, but for now, you and I have been called as Christians to serve sacrificially where it hurts," she said.

"Normal Christian service is sacrificial service and is to bear the marks of suffering and sacrifice. It must always go the second mile. When you are working in a mission hospital on the field, it ain't no 9-to-5 job. Isn't Jesus our best example of compassion, of going the extra mile?"

Expressing her appreciation for the work of Samaritan's Purse, Tada added, "No matter how destitute, no matter how impoverished, no matter how forgotten by the world, we all want to be treated with respect and dignity. Thank you for doing that."

ORDINARY PEOPLE, EXTRAORDINARY SERVICE FOR GOD

Powerful testimonies, uplifting worship, and medical training seminars gave conference goers much to contemplate and to celebrate. Becky Williams, the Director of Development and a guiding light for World Medical Mission for nearly four decades, was honored by Samaritan's Purse President Franklin Graham for her distinguished service and upcoming birthday.

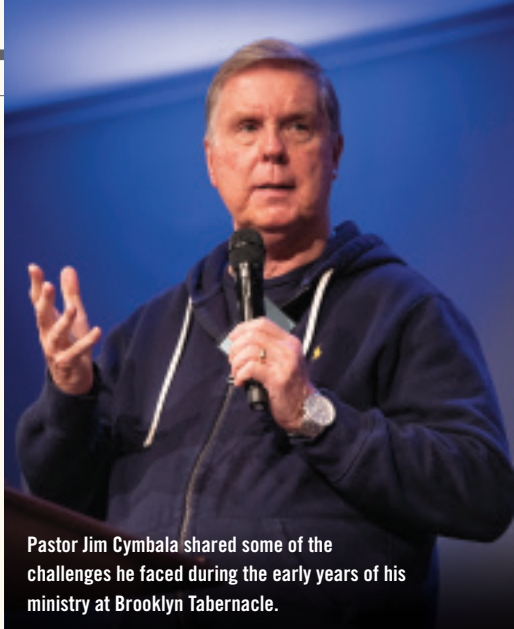

"I'm 80 years young and I'm still learning," she said.

Graham presented Williams with a collection of 80 letters from doctors who have served with World Medical Mission on short-term trips. With a touch of humor and sincere thanks, their messages expressed a deep admiration for her work.

Jim Cymbala, the pastor of Brooklyn Tabernacle in New York City since the 1970s, also served as keynote speaker and shared an inspiring message of blessing through obedience.

He reflected on the remarkable life and ministry of the late Billy Graham, whom Cymbala said he had the opportunity to meet a few months before the acclaimed evangelist passed away.

"He was an ordinary person. Not an orator. Not with 17 degrees after his name. But God uses regular people in extraordinary ways," he stated. "Down through history God has used men and women in miraculous ways. He wants to take all of our lives and make them a miracle.

"What the world needs is to see Jesus revealed through our lives. When God is working, the result is more than the sum of the parts. You can't explain it. Then we can point them to Jesus and the power of God's grace."

The Missionary Medicine Seminar, which begins the day before Prescription for Renewal and continues through Saturday afternoon, was offered again this year for medical professionals seeking Continuing Medical Education credits. Along with classroom-style instruction, participants had the opportunity to learn about ultrasound and SIGN Nail techniques at hands-on workshops.

Additional opportunities for service with Samaritan's Purse were highlighted at the conference. These included Disaster Assistance Response teams (DART) and the Emergency Field Hospital, Children's Heart Project, cleft lip and cataract surgery programs, and malnutrition prevention and treatment projects.

The Spouses Session held on Friday

Serving in Kenya was a great blessing for Dr. Will Copeland and his family. They are raising funds to return long term to Tenwek Hospital.

morning featured talks by Dr. Judith Blumhofer and Hannah Thompson. Thompson has served with her husband Keith, a physician, on multiple trips with World Medical Mission. Blumhofer, a pediatrician, came to Hospital Loma de Luz in Honduras through the Post-Residency Program and continues to serve there as a career missionary.

COUNTING THE COST

Seeing patients come to faith in Christ is the ultimate goal of World Medical Mission, and several testimonies of changed lives were shared by conference speakers. Dr. Allan Sawyer, an OB/GYN from Arizona, spoke of a village baptism he witnessed while serving in Togo.

“They were all making public their faith in Christ. All because of one woman who had received her care at the Hospital of Hope and was ministered to and accepted Jesus as her Lord and Savior,” Sawyer said. “With the help of the hospital chaplains, she went back to her community and started a Bible study and led all of her friends and neighbors, and even the chief of the village, to the Lord.”

Dr. Will Copeland recounted God’s miraculous provision in the life of a man who had suffered a brain aneurysm. It was Copeland’s first day at Tenwek Hospital in Kenya, where the young neurosurgeon had begun his two-year service through the Post-Residency Program. The patient recovered, and Copeland marveled to see God’s healing power displayed.

Copeland recently completed the Post-Residency Program and is raising support in the U.S. with plans to return long-term to Tenwek with his wife and their six children. But his patients are not the only ones who have experienced life-changing encounters with Christ.

“We want patients to know the value of Jesus. But Jesus doesn’t just want that for the poor and oppressed in Africa,” Copeland told conference attendees. “He wants it for us too, that we would consider our wealth, our possessions, our reputation, our families, even whether we live or die, as loss compared to knowing Jesus.”

Another medical professional who has faithfully followed God’s call in his own life is Dr. Read Vaughan, a Montana radiologist who received this year’s “In the Footsteps of the Great Physician” award. Vaughan has served with World Medical Mission on 14 volunteer trips to Kenya, Ethiopia, and Honduras.

His wife Suzie travels with him and has developed a thriving outreach to women, orphans, and the disabled in the Tenwek community. (Read their story on page 14.)

The conference concluded with a Sunday morning message from Dr. David Bruce, the long-time executive assistant to Billy Graham at his Montreat, N.C., office, followed by Communion and a commissioning prayer for World Medical Mission volunteers. 🌐

In addition to inspiring speakers like Joni Eareckson Tada (above), the World Medical Mission conference offered expanded programming in 2018 that included more sessions for Continuing Medical Education credits. Workshops included demonstrations in SIGN Nail (right) and ultrasound technology (below).

Little steps of faith propelled Dr. Read Vaughan and his wife Suzie on a journey of service that has impacted lives on three continents. The Montana radiologist is the recipient of the 2018 “In the Footsteps of the Great Physician” award.

“A SMA

LLYES"

Ten years ago, Dr. Read Vaughan and his wife Suzie were empty-nesters who were nearing their retirement years and looking for a new adventure. They felt the Lord calling them to serve abroad—something they had planned to do for years—but they had no clear direction.

“I was waiting for a voice from God telling us where to serve,” Read recalled. “But Suzie suggested we should just put ourselves out there and trust Him to direct our steps.”

The Montana couple traveled to North Carolina to attend their first Prescription for Renewal conference, hoping to learn about opportunities through World Medical Mission. Read wanted to put his skills as a radiologist to use, but he knew that most mission hospitals had limited X-ray capabilities.

During the 2008 conference, Read met doctors from Tenwek Hospital in Kenya, and he was excited to learn that his expertise was greatly needed there. The Vaughans had already scheduled a family vacation to East Africa the following spring, so Read decided to tack on another week to visit Tenwek.

His inaugural trip was memorable. “At the airport we confused our luggage. Read went to Tenwek with my skirts, and I flew home to Montana with his catheter equipment,” Suzie said. “That was his debut.”

It was also Read’s first mission trip since a four-month stint in Liberia during his medical school days. Since then the Vaughans have served with World Medical Mission 10 times at Tenwek and made four trips to our partner hospitals in Honduras, Peru, and Ethiopia.

“We responded by taking baby steps, with just a small yes at an opportunity to go and serve," said Read. "Then God kept showing us ways that we could help and meet a need. Now Tenwek has become a huge part of our lives and we are able to see Him work in incredible ways there."

Dr. Read Vaughan has served several times at Tenwek Hospital and helps recruit other Christian radiologists to do online readings of CT scans.

FINDING A NICHE

There's no doubt Read and Suzie are a dynamic duo, and both were acknowledged for their numerous contributions to Tenwek Hospital and the outlying community at the 2018 Prescription for Renewal conference.

Read was honored with the "In the Footsteps of the Great Physician" plaque, awarded each year to a World Medical Mission volunteer for distinguished foreign medical service. As a "champion" for Tenwek's radiology department, he has been instrumental in recruiting dozens of Christian radiologists, raising donations for new equipment, and serving patients with compassion and a commitment to sharing the Gospel.

Suzie was recognized for initiating several programs that specifically minister to the needs of vulnerable women and children in the Tenwek community. She was presented with a handmade quilt, a gift paying homage to the "Threads of Hope" sewing school she helped start two years ago.

Read's initial introduction to Tenwek would pave the way for everything else that has transpired since 2009. He found a tight-knit community of missionaries. His skills and insight were readily welcomed in the radiology department. And the opportunity to teach Kenyan interns and residency students was a dream come true.

"It was a place where we could get plugged in," he said.

During the first few times they served in Kenya, the Vaughans would go once a year for a two-to-four week stay, fully immerse themselves in Tenwek life, and then return to their quiet world in Montana. But their level of commitment changed dramatically in 2011 with an exciting new development at the hospital—the installation of a CT scanner in the radiology department.

That meant the need for radiologists multiplied virtually overnight. At the time, there were only Read and a few others who served at Tenwek on an intermittent basis. However, Read agreed to do whatever he could from at home in Montana to help recruit volunteer radiologists.

"Tenwek has become a huge part of our lives and we are able to see [God] work in incredible ways there."

Working with World Medical Mission staff, Read's ongoing efforts have produced a network of over 100 Christian radiologists from across the United States and Canada who are interested in overseas missions. About 40 of these doctors have either gone to Tenwek or participated from home doing teleradiology readings—sending online interpretations of scans when there is no radiologist onsite at the hospital. These volunteers interpret more than 3,000 CT scans a year for Tenwek.

Through this network, Read also helped raise funds for equipment—including three new X-ray machines and four ultrasound machines—and to remodel the radiology department. Read's and Suzie's involvement with the hospital further deepened when he was invited to join the board of directors of Friends of Tenwek, a nonprofit organization that develops relationships and resources to help the hospital fulfill its mission.

"God has expanded our territory. We had not planned on or had a vision for any of these things, but as God cracked open the door, we walked through it," said Suzie.

CHAMPIONING THE MARGINALIZED

While Read devotes his time to the radiology program, Suzie has found her calling as an advocate for the vulnerable women and children who live in the greater Tenwek community. Her heart is especially burdened for the single mothers, prostitutes, widows, and orphans who are castaways in their villages.

Through the "Threads of Hope" sewing school that she initiated in 2017, needy women learn a vocation and are mentored spiritually. Graduates work to earn a sewing machine after completing the eight-month program. Suzie also started a sewing ministry that employs local women to sew reusable cloth sanitary pads for schoolgirls and female prisoners.

In addition, she and Read helped establish the Faith Fund two years ago that has thus far provided physical therapy for 300 special needs children and distributed 150 wheelchairs.

Whether they are at Tenwek or working on its behalf 8,000 miles away in Montana, the Vaughans are grateful for the privilege to serve. They can't wait to see what door of opportunity the Lord opens next.

"We are so glad we said yes 10 years ago," Read told the audience at Prescription for Renewal. "Our faith has deepened, our marriage has been enriched, and along the way we have made a ton of new friends. It has been a wonderful journey." 🌐

“Why we are here”

Dr. Thiessen demonstrates the compassion of Christ as he interacts with patients like this girl, who is recovering from a foot injury.

tell my medical students that with great privilege comes great responsibility. And it truly is a privilege to do what I get to do. It's the reason I work long and hard hours.

When I signed up for a surgical residency, I didn't do it for the money. I certainly wasn't looking for a life of ease. To be honest, I was slightly naive at the time of all that it would demand. But I knew that surgery was an invaluable tool that could be used to impact the world around me.

Covering the ward this week, I start my day seeing all our inpatients. This last month the surgery department was the busiest it has been in the history of Kibuye with more surgeries, more consults, and more hospitalized patients than ever before. Yet we had below-average numbers of deaths. This week alone we had over 50 hospitalized surgical patients at one point.

At several minutes per patient, if we add some bedside teaching, rounding on every patient can take around four hours. Then begins the daily tasks of checking X-rays, wound care, fracture reductions, casting, discharges, and new consults that arrive in emergency and clinic throughout the day.

My students have quickly learned that surgery life is not easy. It requires long hours of patient care while studying outside those hours.

This week included rounding on one of the medical students who was sick—in his dorm bed. His student colleagues put on their most serious faces and presented him as they would any other surgery patient. We even offered him a surgical bed so he could complete his work while being sick, although for some unknown reason he politely declined. Surgery life is hard, but we find ways to laugh during the day.

My kids often pray for my patients, and I am so grateful for this. A young boy who fell 16 feet onto his head while playing has been at our hospital for several weeks. His family brought him to Kibuye one week after the accident, paralyzed on one side and unable to speak. I wasn't too hopeful for him when I took him to the operating room. I discovered multiple skull fragments floating around in the back of his head in a sea of infection, although I couldn't find an obvious reason for why the speaking part of his brain was not working. These are the times when from behind my surgical mask I truly cry out to God. Not only because of the injured child on the table before me, but also because paralyzed children in Burundi have very challenging lives ahead of them.

The Thiessen family: Jeshiah, Julie, Seija, Kaden, and Kai.

Over the next days we continued caring for him and did our best to protect his fragile head. The boy's father has been at his bedside each day, feeding, carrying, and moving his son. During my rounds one day this week, the father nearly leaped for joy as he showed me how his son could move both his arm and leg at will. When I offered the boy a lollipop (which I regularly stock in my white coat pockets) he was almost able to speak the word urakoze, meaning “thank you!” And while he is not completely out of the woods yet, I believe that God is the great engineer and healer of the human brain, and I am grateful for His amazing work.

What gets me out of bed early in the morning and keeps me up late at night is the impact of surgery, hope, and compassion which not only bring about healing, but can also give dignity to those who are suffering. Demonstrating the compassion of Jesus in this setting through quality surgical care is truly a privilege. It's what we at Kibuye Hope Hospital want to model to our patients and medical students. It's why we are here! 🌐

WHAT REALLY MATTERS

Two World Medical Mission volunteers administer medicine and compassion to patients in a Haiti clinic.

Dr. Carolyn Grosvenor spent two weeks last fall at Haiti Health Ministries Medical Clinic restoring hope and health to patients like Felix (above).

Laboring to breathe and to walk, Felix sank down onto a chair in the consultation room and looked expectantly at the familiar face of Dr. Carolyn Grosvenor. It was his third trip to the clinic in as many days.

The elderly man was weakened by pneumonia and had come for another round of IV-administered antibiotics. But he was also seeking something else from the doctor.

"Are you going to pray for me again?" he asked in Creole.

Dr. Grosvenor was happy to comply with the Haitian believer's request. With the assistance of an interpreter, she prayed for restored strength for Felix. She told him that her friends in the United States were praying for him too. His face immediately brightened.

"I was encouraged to see on this visit that he was doing better and smiling," said Grosvenor, who continued to treat him until he recovered from pneumonia. "It means a lot to me to know that I was able to be a part of God's work in giving Felix hope for the future."

Grosvenor had the pleasure of praying with patients and treating their physical ailments during her two-week service trip last September to the Haiti Health Ministries Medical Clinic. It was her first time volunteering with World Medical Mission, but her sixth time doing missions work in Haiti.

"The Lord has not called me to work with the rich and famous. He has called me to the Haitian people," she said.

Grosvenor is well aware of Haiti's pressing needs, especially regarding medical services. An already inadequate health care system was stressed far beyond its limits following the 2010 earthquake and subsequent cholera epidemic. Hurricane Matthew's fury on the southern end of the island nation in 2016 only magnified the physical suffering.

Rebuilt after the 2010 earthquake, the new medical clinic in Gressier, Haiti, sees about 150 to 200 patients a day.

There are only 25 doctors and 11 nurses per 100,000 people in the country, according to the website GlobalSecurity.org. And there is a noticeable dearth of health clinics to provide primary care in rural areas.

THE RELUCTANT MISSIONARY

A semi-retired internist living in Albany, New York, Grosvenor never would have imagined going on a mission trip to anywhere just 10 years ago. The self-described “bug-phobic, city girl from Harlem” went on her first mission trip at the age of 58. Going to Honduras required a huge stretching of her faith, but she survived and ventured further south to Ecuador the following year. That was in 2013, when she felt the Lord calling her to go to Haiti.

“God said Haiti, and I said no,” Grosvenor confessed. “I had a lot of excuses. I feared I would get sick. I was afraid of voodoo.”

Grosvenor says God gave her a Scripture along with that call to serve in Haiti—James 1:27—“Pure and undefiled religion before God and the Father is this: to visit orphans and widows in their trouble.” Still, she struggled with what she knew God was leading her to do. “I finally said, ‘OK, am I going to trust God or not?’”

The next March she went with a mission team to Haiti, where she provided care for acute and chronically ill patients at clinics that had been temporarily set up in churches and schools during evangelistic events. Since then she has made four more short trips with the sending agency.

At the 2017 Global Health Missions Conference, Grosvenor learned World Medical Mission needed volunteers to serve at an established outpatient facility in Haiti. She was eager for the opportunity to work in a more traditional medical setting where she could provide follow-up care and build relationships.

Encouraging patients to take charge of their lifestyle choices was one of her biggest challenges. “Many of them don’t seem to understand what causes conditions like high blood pressure or diabetes and what their role is in healthy eating or healthy life practices,” she said. “They think that diseases are caused by spirits, or it runs in their family, that it’s something they just have to live with.”

Jeff Smith, a family nurse practitioner from Colorado, has served twice at the clinic and admires the resiliency of the Haitian people.

Grosvenor plans to return to Haiti in 2019 and go on a mission trip to Albania in September. She is grateful for the support of her family and friends who encourage her to keep stepping out in faith. Perhaps no one is more surprised than she is to see the direction God has taken her life.

“It didn’t happen overnight, but God changed my attitudes and my heart. He gave me compassion for needy people, for people in dire straits,” she said. “These are not things that I wanted to do or planned to do. But now they are the things that bring me the greatest fulfillment.”

SMALL ACTS OF KINDNESS

During his six weeks of service at the clinic in 2017, Jeff Smith was deeply moved by the physical and emotional wounds he saw. The retired family nurse practitioner from Colorado wanted to help alleviate some of that suffering, so he volunteered again with World Medical Mission for another six-week stint this past fall.

“I once heard someone say that they weren’t afraid of failure. Their greatest fear was succeeding at something that didn’t matter. Well, what you do in Haiti really matters,” said Smith. “That’s why I went the first time and why I came back.”

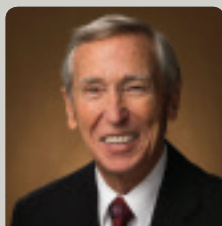

Each time Smith was impressed with the resilience of his patients, despite their hardships. Even for patients facing irreversible medical issues, he found that the smallest acts of kindness made a big difference.

One woman had lost her baby and was beset with grief. Smith attentively listened to her story and prayed for God’s comfort. As tears fell, her eyes shone with a new hope and determination. Another patient was a 17-year-old girl who looked like she was 12. Tests revealed she had tuberculosis. Earlier in the year her leg had been amputated due to a rampant infection. This latest bad news was a tough blow. But Smith reassured the teen that TB medication was available, and he helped arrange for her to be admitted into a local sanitarium for treatment.

Although Smith and Grosvenor view their work as unglamorous, both made a lasting impact as they shared the hope of the Gospel with hurting people. Knowing that someone genuinely cares about them, and that they have a Savior who loves them, is something their patients will long remember.

And that’s what really matters. 🌐

Richard Furman

ANSWERING THE CALL

Dr. Richard Furman,
co-founder of World Medical Mission

We had a record crowd at this year's Prescription for Renewal. For anyone who has not attended, I strongly encourage you to do so. It is a life changer in so many ways. There are always inspiring speakers as well as reports from the mission field that stir our hearts concerning how the Lord can use us on the field and at home.

Jim Cymbala, pastor of the Brooklyn Tabernacle Church, and Joni Eareckson Tada gave personal testimonies of how God used them, despite their challenging circumstances. Joni told how she dove into shallow water when she was a teenager and became paralyzed from her shoulders down. Her life for Christ has been an inspiration to us all. I was especially moved when she described how God has seen her through tough times.

One special moment that caught my attention was when the crowd of almost 500 in The Cove auditorium was asked how many had never been to the mission field. Approximately half raised their hands. It was a great reminder that Prescription for Renewal weekend is our biggest tool to encourage doctors to give their time and talents for the Lord's work overseas.

Your life as a doctor will change when you utilize your skills in places where the need is so great. Many of the doctors who go overseas to serve in a mission hospital or at our Emergency Field Hospital come back home telling stories of the differences they made in people's lives. There are patients who would not have been operated on, someone who had a medical problem that would not have been treated, or someone who had been overlooked from a medical standpoint for many years who finally came to the hospital and was successfully taken care of.

But there is always more to their story.

They share how the experience overseas changed their lives.

Taking care of patients in a mission hospital where there is a spiritual emphasis is usually very different from their workplace environment in the United States. They explain how their trip had an effect not only on their patients overseas, but also on themselves and how they began caring for patients back home differently than before their trip.

There is something special about giving a portion of your medical time serving the Lord overseas. You will see patients whose living conditions are very different from what we know in America. It will change your life. It will change your outlook, and it will change your practice once you are back home. It won't glorify you, but it will glorify God.

"Not unto us,
O Lord, not unto us, but to Your name give glory."
